Playing Up a Division

Policy and Application

Players are encouraged to play in their own age division. Playing up is an exception for players who have the skill, maturity and readiness to play with older players. Applying does not guarantee approval.

How to apply

1. The player must be entering their second year in their age-appropriate division.
2. Email the completed application to contactus@nrll.ca before regular season registration closes.
3. Provide a reference from an independent coach who can speak to the player's skill, maturity, behaviour and readiness to play with older players. The reference cannot be a parent, family member or close family friend.
4. The Player Agent Committee will review the application and contact the reference. Families will be notified before evaluations whether the player is approved to continue through the playing up process.

Evaluation requirements

5. The player must attend evaluations in their own age division and rank first in that division before being invited to evaluate in the higher division.
6. Families must be ready to attend the higher division's evaluations, as there may be little notice. Players who cannot attend will remain in their own age division.
7. To play up, the player must rank within the top 10% of available AAA roster spots in the higher division. This is based on roster spots, not the number of players trying out.
8. Players approved to play up cannot be placed on an AA team in the higher division. Players who do not meet the requirements will remain in their own age division.

Maturity and readiness

Skill alone is not enough. Players must show good sportsmanship, manage their emotions and handle winning and losing appropriately. These factors will be considered when reviewing the application and coach reference.

All Stars

Approval to play up during the regular season does not guarantee an All-Star spot. To play All-Stars in the higher division, the player must rank within the top 10% of roster spots on that division's AAA All-Star team. This is based on the team's roster size, not the number of players trying out.
